A story of transformation and growth

Sensing an opportunity to serve the growing business community of Providence, Rhode Island, Moses Frank founded Admiral Packaging (formerly Union Paper Company) in 1898 as a supplier of paper and stationery products. The company grew steadily through the early 1900's, maintaining a commitment to customer service that lives on today. In 1954, under the leadership of Bud Frank, Admiral entered into the converting marketplace. Through the investment in the most advanced equipment available at the time, Admiral quickly became one of the largest converters in the Eastern United States. Printing capabilities were soon added and in 1962, the company moved to its present location in Providence. Harley Frank, the fourth generation of the Frank family, has continued to guide and grow the company through the turn of the century.
